At 4th, 5th and 6th of September I visited Adelgarden Integrerede Institution here some information, questions and important impressions that came up during my visit at the kindergarten.

Description of the Institution:

The school was the center of Copenhagen. Every day a bus was taking the children from the kindergarten and took them to a farm outside Copenhagen. The kindergarten yard was big with grass, trees, sand pit, swings and a place that could light a fire and cut wood. Some days they're going excursions into the forest to explore. There they have a shelter that they made themselves.

Most important impressions:

This kindergarten was very different from the ones I've visited. Throughout the day the children are playing in the yard. Also they are free to cut wood themselves knowing that the tool that they are holding is not a toy. Although the kids are free all day but they have some rules which must be respected. For example when they go out in the forest they're not getting away from teachers. If they don't see someone stop and wait for the rest. Children know that once they get in to the kindergarten should put their food in the refrigerator. Thereafter they are free to do whatever they want.

Relationship between children and grown up's:

Teachers they're not always near to children they are just watching the kids from distance. I didn't hear any child or teacher shout or arguing. This is an important part of the relationship between the children and the teachers because children trust them more. They learn to solve their disagreements with other children through discussion and not screaming and crying. The children say their teachers by their first name.

New questions I had:

How do the children know that they can't pass their yard and go to the yard next to them. Teachers told me that the oldest kids learn the rules to the youngest and they know what is allowed to do and not.
